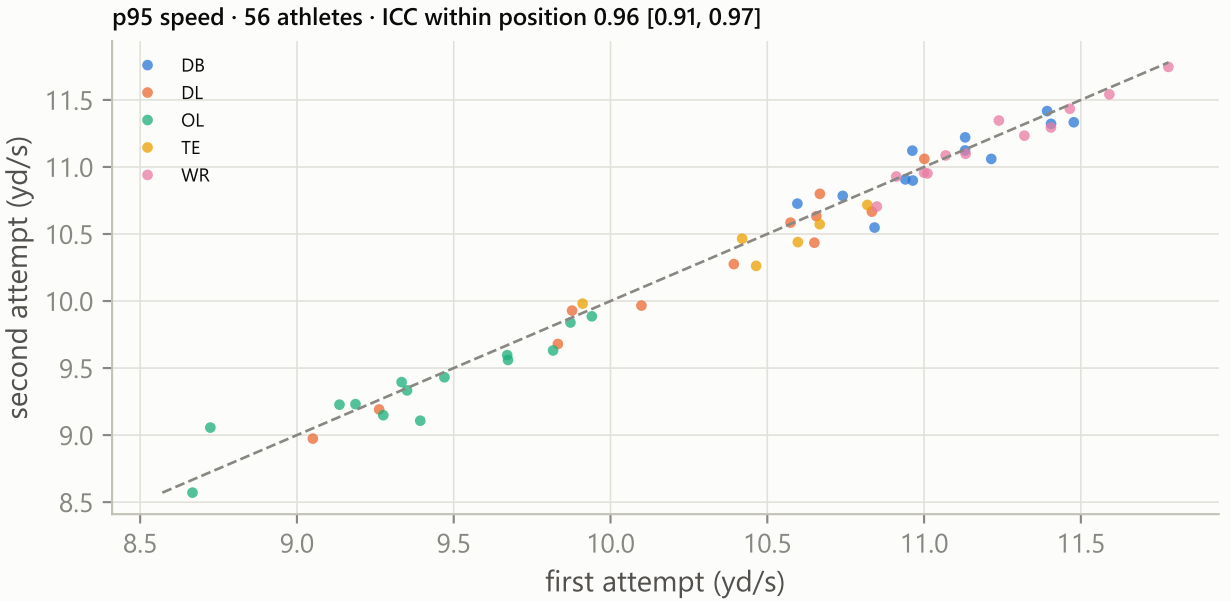
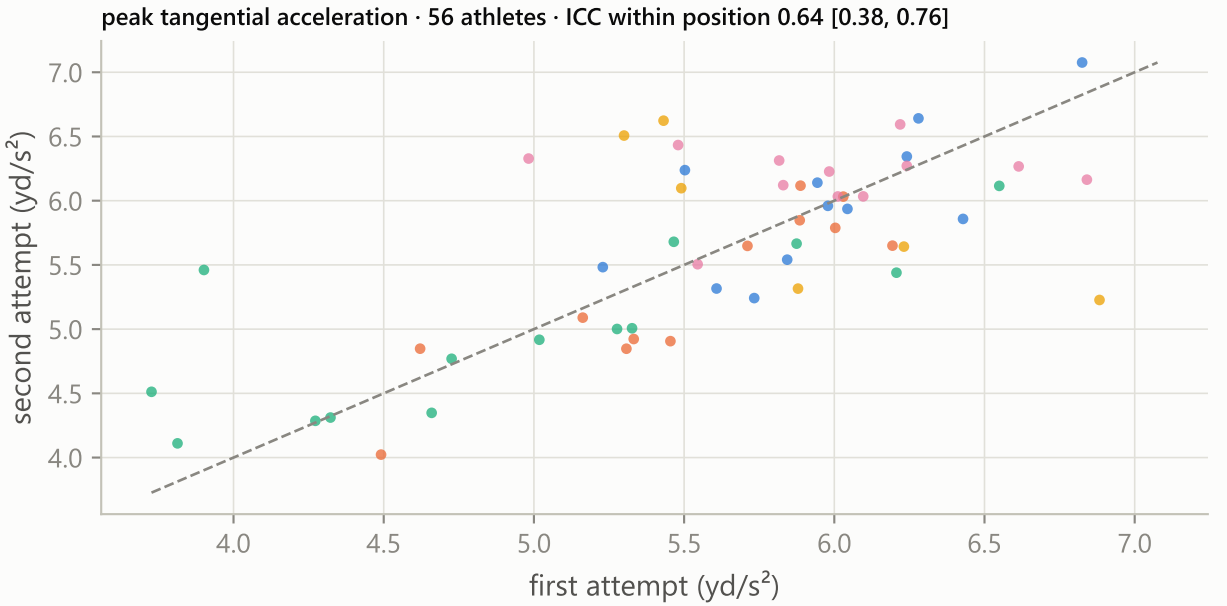
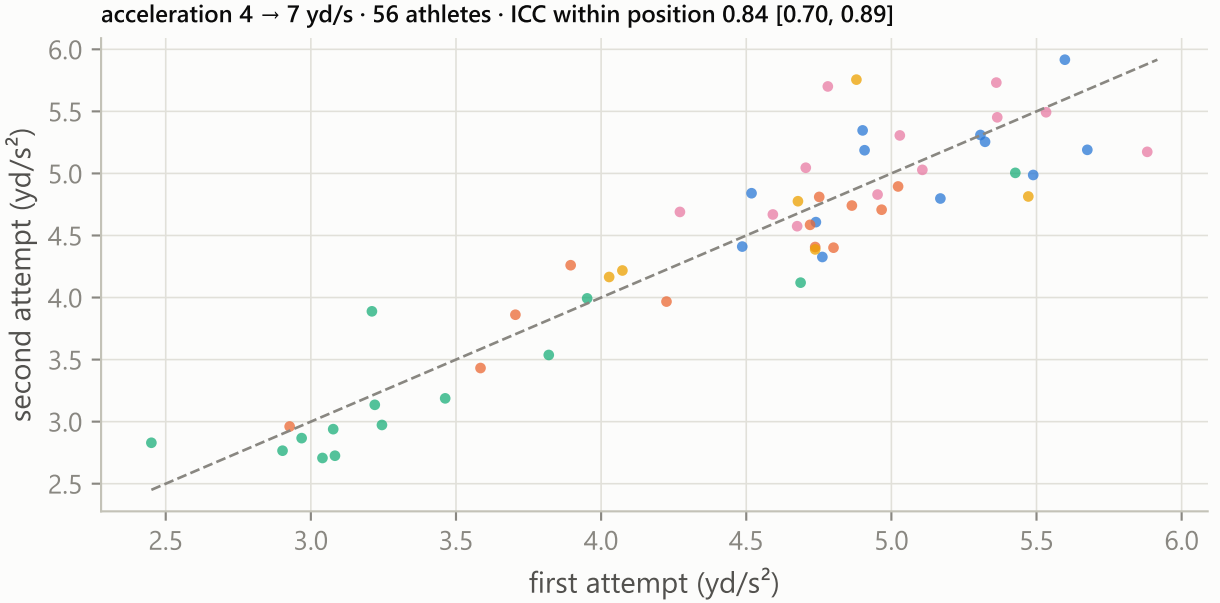
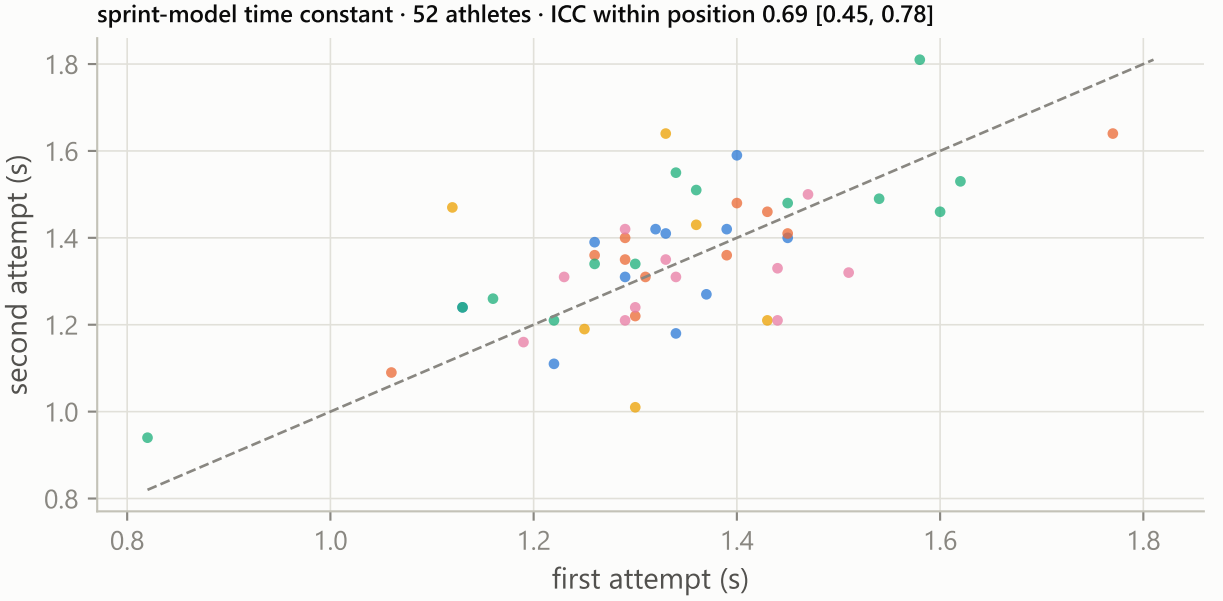
Reliable speed measurements against unreliable derivatives









Unit: athlete with two attempts carrying a value (first two in time). Dashed line = identical attempts. The pooled cloud of a speed looks tight partly because position groups differ; the ICC in each title is computed within position. A derivative taken on a single frame scatters far from the line: its attempt-to-attempt noise is of the size of the differences between athletes.