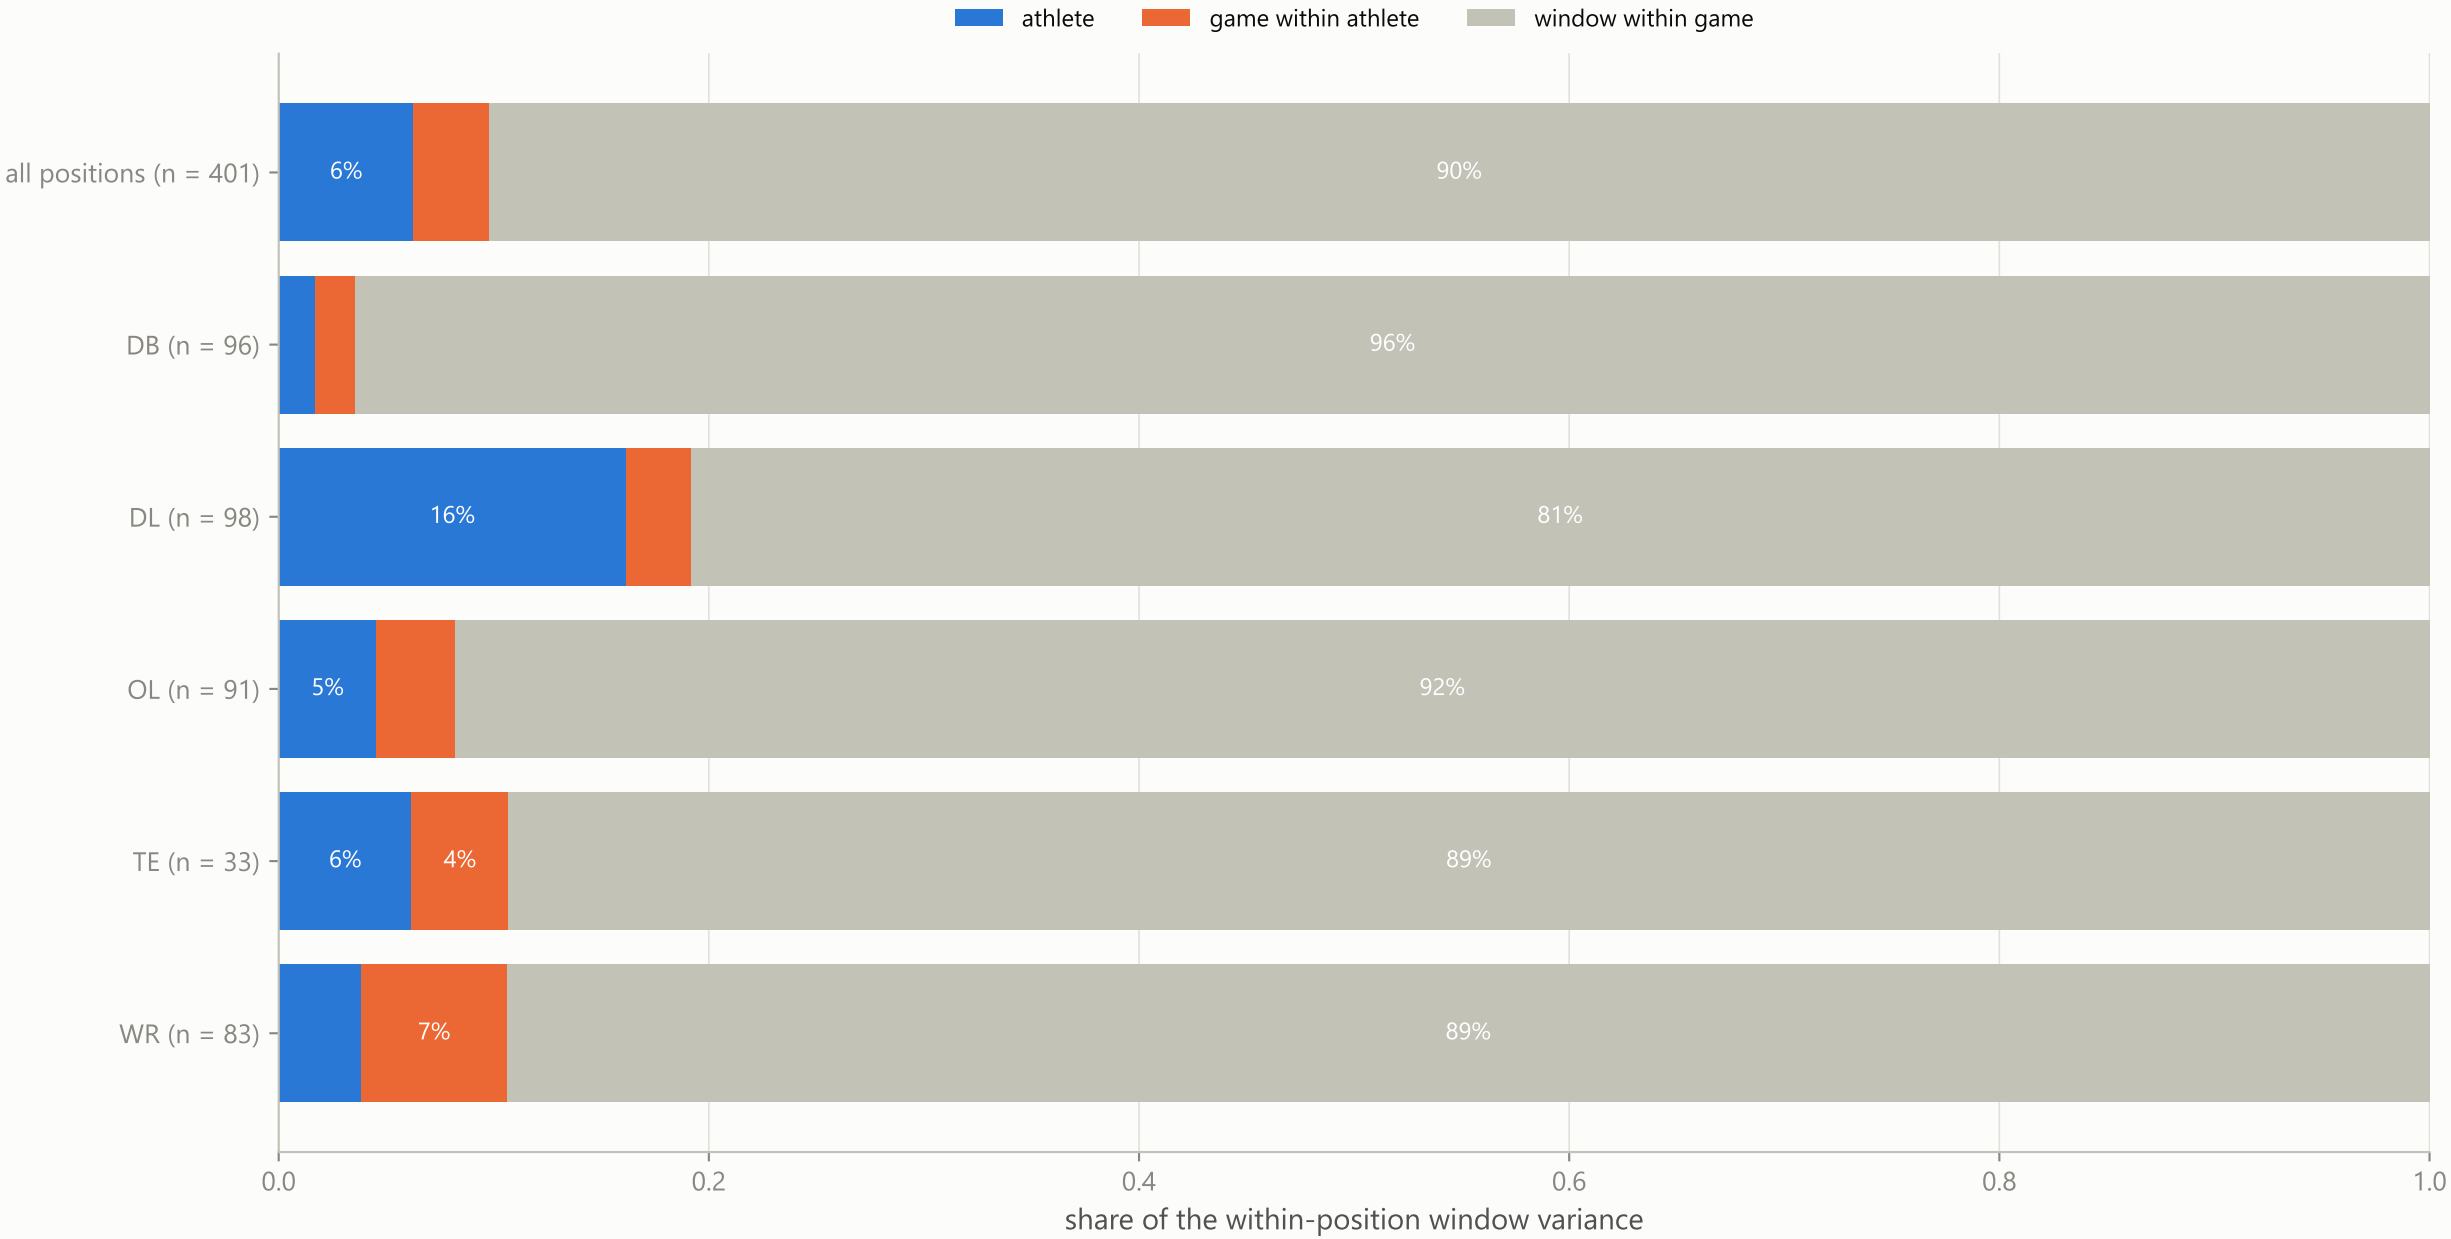
What one NFL window is made of



Nested method-of-moments components, pooled within position. A single window is mostly window-to-window variation; an athlete VALUE averages many windows, which is why it can be reliable although the athlete share of one window is small. Position alone carries 37% of all window variance.